

International House

International House, one of the more recently established dormitories on campus, housed seventeen women of all races and creeds. The house was established in 1947 at the request of student and faculty members.

Mary Boatner played the leading role in the University Theatre production of "The Taming of the Shrew." Peg Bangert of former Quiz Kid fame was another house member. Ansuya Joshi, a graduate student in the field of education was from Bombay, India. Also a graduate student was the house counselor, Gertrude Bale, who was working for her Master's degree in music.

Social activities for the year included an all-school dance in the 300 Room and a hayride. Gwen Robb was the house candidate for the Junior Prom queen.

The house officers elected for the year were Wanda Parsons, president; Betty Lou Nemeth, secretary; Sally Patrick, social chairman; and Betsy Caton, treasurer.

Front Row: B. Caton, W. Parsons, G. Bale, B. Nemeth.
Back Row: M. Mullen, M. Boatner, G. Hyatt, D. Johnson.

Front Row: L. Trachtenberg, C. Bader, O. Clark, D. Rhodes, D. Rometty.
Back Row: D. Moorefield, S. Bassett, G. Wooden, D. Krusel, J. Azhderian.

Spencer House

Housing only thirteen girls, Spencer Hall had the distinction of being the smallest women's dormitory on campus. Doris Rhodes, Caryl Bader, Gloria Wooden and Donna Mae Krusel were active in the university choral groups during the year, and Jeannine Bradley participated in a UT production.

Members of professional and honorary societies included Dolores Moorefield, SAI and Alpha Lambda Delta; Ruth Chanin, Sigma Alpha Iota; and Lenore Trachtenberg, Phi Beta Kappa, Dolores Rometty, Delta Omicron; Caryl Bader and Donna Mae Krusel, Mu Phi Epsilon; and Jeannine Bradley and Sally Bassett, Phi Beta.

Standards Committee for the house was made up of Ruth Chanin, president; Peggy Kendall, secretary; Caryl Bader, treasurer; Doris Rhodes, social chairman; and Dolores Rometty, scholarship chairman.

International House

International House, one of the more recently established dormitories on campus, housed seventeen women of all races and creeds. The house was established in 1947 at the request of student and faculty members.

Mary Boatner played the leading role in the University Theatre production of "The Taming of the Shrew." Peg Bangert of former Quiz Kid fame was another house member. Ansuya Joshi, a graduate student in the field of education was from Bombay, India. Also a graduate student was the house counselor, Gertrude Bale, who was working for her Master's degree in music.

Social activities for the year included an all-school dance in the 300 Room and a hayride. Gwen Robb was the house candidate for the Junior Prom queen.

The house officers elected for the year were Wanda Parsons, president; Betty Lou Nemeth, secretary; Sally Patrick, social chairman; and Betsy Caton, treasurer.

Front Row: B. Caton, W. Parsons, G. Bale, B. Nemeth.
Back Row: M. Mullen, M. Boatner, G. Hyatt, D. Johnson.

Front Row: L. Trachtenberg, C. Bader, O. Clark, D. Rhodes, D. Rometty.
Back Row: D. Moorefield, S. Bassett, G. Wooden, D. Krusel, J. Azhderian.

Spencer House

Housing only thirteen girls, Spencer Hall had the distinction of being the smallest women's dormitory on campus. Doris Rhodes, Caryl Bader, Gloria Wooden and Donna Mae Krusel were active in the university choral groups during the year, and Jeannine Bradley participated in a UT production.

Members of professional and honorary societies included Dolores Moorefield, SAI and Alpha Lambda Delta; Ruth Chanin, Sigma Alpha Iota; and Lenore Trachtenberg, Phi Beta Kappa, Dolores Rometty, Delta Omicron; Caryl Bader and Donna Mae Krusel, Mu Phi Epsilon; and Jeannine Bradley and Sally Bassett, Phi Beta.

Standards Committee for the house was made up of Ruth Chanin, president; Peggy Kendall, secretary; Caryl Bader, treasurer; Doris Rhodes, social chairman; and Dolores Rometty, scholarship chairman.