Dear Librarian;

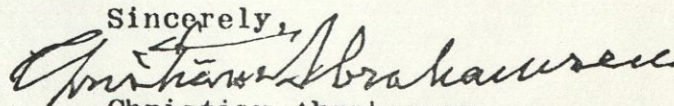

I am inquiring whether the biography of John Henry Wigmore by your former librarian, Wm. Roalfe, has been published.

Dean Wigmore asked for and received my cooperation when the new library was constructed. My contribution to Dean Wigmore was as a consultant, particularly in the large room resembling a courtroom, where students could have a chance to participate in trials and legal proceedings. The large lecture hall was a copy of the House of Commons.

Dean Wigmore asked me to go to the Twin Cities, where I was to make a facsimile of Abraham Lincoln's portrait, which would hang above the lecturn. A former student of Dean Wigmore's invited me to be a guest at the Hotel Radisson in Minneapolis, where assistance was granted, and it was one of the happiest moments for me in this country. Dean Wigmore was truly inspiring, making law meaningful, maintaining protection and security in the cities, villages, and in the countryside at large.

I wish to see Dean Wigmore's reference brought to the public, and hope the biography has been published. I'll be looking forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Christian Abrahamsen

Dear Mr. Abrahamsen:

I am enclosing a brochure describing Mr. Roalfe's biography which is now available.

Dean Wignore's contribution to the law school and the world of law is greatly appreciated here. The biography will serve as an excellent means to enlighten those who never knew him.

Sincerely,

Elaine E. Teigler

Dear Mr. Abrahamsen:

Elaine E. Teigler, our Assistant Librarian, has advised me of your letter of February 6, 1978, requesting information on the biography of John Henry Wigmore. In view of your association with Dean Wigmore and your artistic contribution to the Law School, we are sending you a copy of John Henry Wigmore - Scholar and Reformer by William R. Roalfe as a gift. You should receive the book within a few weeks.

Enclosed is a copy of The Reporter, the Law School's quarterly magazine, which may be of interest to you.

Best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

J. William Elwin, Jr.
Assistant Dean
